Anya could really use a friend. But her new BFF isn't kidding about the "Forever" part . . .

Of all the things Anya expected to find at the bottom of an old well, a new friend was not one o

When crossing sentences (when the omitted text contains a period, so that omitting the end of a sentence counts), a four-dot, spaced (except for before the first dot) ellipsis (...) should be used. When ellipsis points are used in the original text, ellipsis points that are not in the original text should be distinguished by enclosing them in square brackets (e.g. The Chicago Manual of Style suggests the use of an ellipsis for any omitted word, phrase, line, or paragraph from within but not at the end of a quoted passage. The stylebook indicates that if the shortened sentence before the mark can stand as a sentence, it should do so, with an ellipsis placed after the period or other ending punctuation. This conveys to the reader a focus of the narrative "camera" on the silent subject, implying an expectation of some motion or action.

Caesura Cohesion (linguistics) Elision Omission or deletion of a sound or syllable
Leader (typography) A row of characters (usually dots or dashes) to connect items across a page (as in a table of contents)
Leiden Conventions Line break (poetry) Pausa
In the Unicode standard, there are the following characters:
In manga, the ellipsis by itself represents speechlessness, or a "pregnant pause"
In writing [edit] Note that ISO/IEC 8859 encoding series provides no code point for ellipsis

Computer representations [edit] When the ellipse is placed alone into a parenthesis (.) or less often between brackets [], which is what happens usually within a text transcription, it means the original text had more contents on the same position but are not useful to our target in the transcription.

$$1 + 2 + 3 + \dots + 100$$

Programming languages [edit] The CSS text-overflow property can be set to ellipsis, which cuts off text with an ellipsis when it overflows the content area. [18][19]

Example for both cases, using German style: The first el. is stands for omitted letters, the second In writing, the ellipsis consists usually of six dots (two 3-ten rd characters,) When material is omitted at the end of a paragraph and also immediately following it, an ellipsis goes both at the end of that paragraph and at the beginning of the next, according to this style. [11] In French typography, the ellipsis is written close up to the preceding word but has a space after it "text [] text".
